“He that hath much to do, will do something wrong, and of that wrong must suffer the consequences; and if it were possible that he should always act rightly, yet when such numbers are to judge of his conduct, the bad will censure and obstruct him by malevolence, and the good sometimes by mistake.”—SAMUEL JOHNSON.

HARTFORD is one of the most important towns in the county. It lies in the northeastern part, in lat. $43^{\circ} 40'$ and long. $4^{\circ} 37'$, bounded north by Norwich, east by the Connecticut river, which separates it from Lebanon, N. H., south by Hartland and west by Pomfret. This was the first township granted by New Hampshire east of the Green Mountains after the close of the French war, receiving its charter July 4, 1761. The grantees, sixty-four in number, were principally from Lebanon, Conn., of whom Prince Tracy, James Phinneo, Jr., and Jonathan Marsh constituted the proprietors' committee. It has an area of 27,000 acres. Within a few months after the charter was obtained, sixty-four fifty-acre lots were laid out, one of which was given to each proprietor to hold in severalty. In 1763 the township was surveyed and proper marks placed at the corners and between the corners at the end of every mile, while at the same time allowance was made for highways and some of them partially prepared for use. These improvements were made by ten of the grantees. From the time the town was chartered until its organization, the proprietors displayed much energy in effecting a settlement, and by their strenuous efforts the requisites of the charter under which the lands were held were faithfully fulfilled.

Hartford has, like most other towns of the county, an uneven surface, yet its river basins and many pleasant valleys afford a large area of level, arable land, while nearly the whole township is susceptible of profitable cultivation and possesses a warm, easily cultivated soil. The principal water-courses are White, Connecticut and Quechee rivers, all of which afford many valuable mill-sites. Connecticut river, as before mentioned, forms the eastern boundary of the township, flowing through a valley that is proverbial for its picturesque beauty. White river flows across the town from the northwestern corner of the same to about the center of the eastern border, where it unites with the Connecticut. This stream also flows through a valley of incomparable loveliness, forming a beautiful picture as it winds along, now rapidly over rock and pebble, then settling down to a wide, sober current, as if to ruminate on its own loveliness, careless alike of the picturesqueness of its path and the beautiful landscape scenery surrounding it. Dotted along its course are the villages of West Hartford, Centerville, Hartford and White River Junction. Quechee river flows a very irregular course through the southwestern part of the town, forming for a short distance the boundary line between Hartford and Woodstock. Upon it are situated the villages of Quechee and Dewey's Mills. Just south of Dewey's Mills the stream flows through the celebrated Quechee chasm. This chasm is one of the most interesting natural curiosities in the State, and no visitor to Hartford should miss seeing it.

The rocks entering into the geological structure of the town are mostly of the calciferous mica schist formation. In the eastern part of the township, however, extending from Hartland through into Norwich, bounded by lines drawn about half a mile respectively east and west of Hartford village, the rocks are of clay slate formation, while east of this, talcose schist predominates. A bed of gneiss, forming the geological structure of the western part of Hartland, extends a short distance into Hartford, lying directly south of Quechee village. No minerals of importance have ever been discovered. Quechee springs, located about two miles from Quechee village, were discovered in 1840, and at one time were quite celebrated for the medical qualities of their water, which is strongly impregnated with muriate of soda and carbonate of lime, with lesser traces of carbonate of soda and muriate of magnesia. Throughout the town are numerous specimens of terrace formations. Along the valley of White river they are numerous, though in the vicinity of Quechee chasm are found the most beautiful examples. In a pasture just at the head of the chasm, opposite Dewey's mills, are five, one above the other, all as clearly defined as though thrown up by the hand of a skillful landscape gardener. Each side of the chasm there can be traced an old river bed, marking two ancient courses of the stream before it wore away the deep gorge that now serves as its channel. These terraces and river beds afford conclusive evidence that an extensive pond or lake once covered the land here, and that it was slowly drained as the stream forming its outlet wore its bed gradually lower and lower, cutting out the schistose rock, until Quechee chasm was formed and the final process of drainage completed.

In 1880 Hartford had a population of 2,955, was divided into fourteen school districts and contained eighteen common schools, employing seven male and twenty-three female teachers, to whom was paid an aggregate salary of $2,890.00. There were 580 pupils attending common school, while the entire cost of the schools for the year, ending October 31st, was $4,459.00, with N. B. Hazen, superintendent.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION is a pleasant little post village located in the eastern part of the town, at the confluence of White river with the Connecticut, being one of the largest railroad centers in the State. It has a fine, large union depot, four churches (Episcopal, Methodist, Roman Catholic and Universalist), a large hotel, several stores of various kinds, an extensive confectionery and cracker manufactory, and the usual compliment of mechanics' shops, etc.

HARTFORD is a pleasant little post village located about a mile west of White River Junction, on White river. It has one church (Congregational), a good hotel, several stores, a harness shop, rake factory, chair factory, saw-mill, grist-mill, etc., and about a hundred dwellings. Pease's Hotel is a fine, well-kept house, a great favorite with both traveling people and summer sojourners. One of the old land-marks of the village, it has been in the possession of the Pease family for over half a century, and the present proprietor, Charles W. Pease, not only keeps up the good reputation of the old hostelry, but constantly increases its popularity by adding modern improvements from time to time, and in looking sharply after the comfort and entertainment of his guests. No more genial, affable landlord than Mr. Pease exists, no pleasanter place than Hartford village can be found for spending the summer, and no more comfortable, home-like public house than Pease's Hotel opens its doors to the stranger.

QUECHEE, a post village and station on the Woodstock railroad, lies in the southern part of the town, on Quechee river. It has one church (Congregational), several stores, a grist-mill, tannery, woolen factory, etc., and about seventy-five dwellings. The river here affords an excellent water-power, to which the village probably owes its existence. This water-power was utilized at a very early period of the town's history. In 1765 the town voted a liberal grant of land for the building of a saw and grist-mill, but it is hardly probable that they were built in accordance with this vote, though the saw-mill was built previous to 1770. In 1783 the town voted to grant Gov. Joseph Marsh certain privileges "so long as he, his heirs or assigns should maintain a grist-mill on these falls in good repair," and it is probable that a grist-mill was erected at once, so as to secure this grant from the town. One authority says it was built by Elisha Marsh, and as Joseph and Elisha Marsh were associated in several business enterprises, they may have built this mill together. The town records indicate that a fulling-mill was erected here at some time previous to 1779, as a transfer of a fulling-mill by Joseph and Elisha Marsh to John Carpenter is recorded in August of that year. This mill was probably used only for finishing the home-made cloth brought in by the neighboring farmers. In 1788 John Carpenter deeded the property to Jonathan Burch. In 1789 Burch deeded it to William Stewart, and during the same month Stewart deeded it to Elisha Marsh.

It is said that the first woolen factory here was built in 1808, by Capt. Raymond, of Vershire, Vt., although his name does not appear on the land records as ever owning or conveying such property. It was a small wooden building with a blacksmith shop in the basement. In 1809 two brothers by the name of Harwood—Benjamin and Eleazer—came to town and put machinery in the mill. Their name was usually pronounced "Herod," and many of the old inhabitants remember them only by this name; but according to the land records it is spelled "Harwood," which is undoubtedly correct. Eleazer owned the real estate alone. These brothers made the first cloth in Quechee, the wool being picked by hand, and the spinning was done by hand-power. The yarn was put out around the neighborhood and woven by hand-looms. The cloth was finished at the mill. In 1814 the Harwoods built the first brick factory, the basement of which was used for a tenement. In 1819 Eleazer Harwood deeded it to his brother-in-law, Abel Penfield. In 1820 the Harwood Bros. failed, after which Penfield continued the business for a short time. In 1821 Samuel Tyler & Co. came from Smithfield, R. I., and started the mill on cassimeres and satinets. The company consisted of Samuel Tyler, Abel P. Chamberlain, James Harendeen and Daniel Winchester. In 1824 Abel Penfield deeded to Samuel Tyler & Co., and in 1825 Tyler & Co. failed. The property then passed to John Downer, Elihu Ransom, Chester Davis and P. Beadford Wolcott, constituting the "Quechee Manuf'g Co." John Downer was president, and Chester Davis manager. Le Baron Putnam subsequently acquired an interest in the concern. This company enlarged the business and put in new machinery for the manufacture of cassimeres. In 1828 or '29 they took down the brick mill, built by the Harwoods in 1814, blasted out a wheel-pit, laid the foundations, and built a small part of the walls of the upper or main factory building that was carried off in the freshet of 1869. In 1830 the company failed, leaving the building but very little above the foundations. In 1831 the outside was completed, probably by the creditors. In December, 1836, after several fractional transfers, arising doubtless from executions against the Quechee Manufacturing Co., William Jarvis, Daniel Bowen, Lyman Mower, G. H. Mower, O. P. Chandler, Hampden Cutts, Francis K. Nichols and John Chase, Jr., deeded to the Mallory Woolen Co. Probably no manufacturing was done here between 1830, when the Quechee Company failed, and 1836, when the Mallory Co. began. In 1832 the Middlebury Bank, which was a creditor of the Quechee Co., deeded a two-thirds part of the mill to Harvey Waters, and in the same year Waters deeded to Peter Farnam, Lewis Mills and John D. Wheeler. In 1836, the various fractional interests were concentrated in the Mallory Woolen Co. By the records this company originally consisted of William Jarvis, Lewis Mills, Francis K. Nichols and John Chase, Jr. The company made broadcloths, starting with a capital of about $50,000.00, and in less than four years it had about all disappeared. William Jarvis advanced money to pay its debts and took a mortgage on the property. In 1840 he foreclosed and took possession, and the Mallory Co. ceased its existence. In 1840 Francis K. Nichols & Co. leased the mill, the company being Francis K. Nichols, John Chase, Jr., Daniel Smith, Abraham Stearns and Reuben Daniels. The first shoddy made in this county was made in 1840, in this mill, by this concern. They continued until 1843, when they became embarrassed financially, but compromised their indebtedness and formed a new partnership under the name of Chase, Smith & Co., composed of the same parties that were in the firm of F. K. Nichols & Co. They continued to manufacture shoddy into satinets until the latter part of 1845. January 1, 1846, A. G. Dewey & Co. leased the mill and continued the shoddy business for nearly two years, Mr. Reuben Daniels being associated with Mr. Dewey. From 1847 to 1857 the mill was idle. In this latter year Denison Taft and Joseph C. Parker came from Barre, Vt., and bought the mill of William Jarvis. They started it the same year and began the manufacture of fine Quechee flannels, which has been continued until the present time. In 1858 Taft sold his share of the real estate to J. C. Parker, who thus became the sole owner. Taft, however, retained a half interest in the business of the mill, and the same firm name was used. Taft & Parker ran the mill until 1866, when Parker sold one-fourth of the real estate to William S. Dewey and one-fourth to William Lindsey. Dewey and Lindsey also bought Taft's interest, and the name of the firm was changed to J. C. Parker & Co. October 4, 1869, a terrible freshet carried away the grist-mill and the upper or main factory building, which latter was built in 1831. In 1870 it was rebuilt. The new factory building is of brick, larger and more substantially built than was the old one. In 1876 Mr. Dewey retired and was succeeded by a son of J. C. Parker. Since this time, there has been no change in ownership. The firm now consists of J. C. Parker, William Lindsey and J. W. Parker. The mill contains seven sets of machinery, with the latest improvements, and produces 1700 to 1800 yards of flannel per day, giving employment to about eighty operatives. In 1866 a pullery for pulling pelts and a tannery for tanning the skins was established in the basement of the lower factory building. This business has been continued to the present time. Upwards of forty thousand pelts are worked yearly, and the wool used in the manufacturing of flannels. J. C. Parker individually rebuilt the grist-mill in 1870, and has run it until the present time. It is a substantial brick building, standing above the upper factory. It contains the best machinery for grinding all grains, the wheat department being particularly complete.

CENTERVILLE is a hamlet located in the central part of the town.

WEST HARTFORD (p. o.) is a small post village and station on the Central Vermont railroad, located in the northwestern part of the town.

DEWEY'S MILLS is a hamlet located in the southern part of the town, the site of A. G. Dewey & Co.'s woolen mills.

E. W. & E. Morris's chair factory, located at Hartford village, was established in 1857. It gives employment to about forty hands, turning out 12,000 dozen chairs per annum, most of which are shipped to South America, Australia or Africa.

French, Watson & Co.'s fork factory, located at Hartford village, was established at Brookfield, Vt., in 1835, and was moved to its present location in 1853. The factory is operated by water-power and gives employment to about twenty hands, in the manufacture of manure forks, garden rakes, shovels, spades, etc. Connected with the factory is a saw-mill that cuts about 200,000 feet of lumber and 500,000 shingles per annum.

Jonathan Bugbee's carriage and blacksmith shop is located at Hartford village. Mr. Bugbee manufactures light and heavy carriages and sleighs, and does a general blacksmithing business.

Z. B. Clark's tannery and saw-mill, located at Hartford village, was built by E. F. Lane, in 1851. Mr. Clark does a large business in the manufacture of chair-stock and fork and hoe handles.

Moore & Peck's grist and flouring-mills are located at Hartford village. It has three runs of stones, with the capacity for grinding sixty bushels of wheat and 200 bushels of coarse grain per day.

A. G. Dewey & Co.'s woolen-mills are located about a mile below Quechee village, on Quechee river. In 1836 the wooden structure was built, by Jasper Strong, of Pensacola, Fla., and was tenanted by Mr. Dewey that season, and in 1869 the brick portion of the mills was built and the old wooden building re-constructed. The firm was then A. G. Dewey, Justin F.

McKenzie and William S. Carter. In 1873 Mr. Carter died, and in 1874 John J. Dewey was taken into the firm. In 1876 William S. Dewey sold his interest in the firm of J. C. Parker & Co. and bought into the firm of A. G. Dewey & Co. This company employs ninety hands in the manufacture of satinets, using six sets of woolen machinery, making about 2,200 yards of cloth per day.

The Olcott Falls Co., P. T. Wilder, president, and H. A. Wilder, secretary and treasurer, have recently completed one of the finest dams in the State, at Olcott falls, on the Connecticut river, giving them a water-power of 10,000 horse-power capacity. This firm intends to build an extensive pulp and paper-mill here, which will prove a valuable acquisition to the business interests of the town.

The first permanent settlement was commenced in the summer of 1764, by Elijah, Solomon and Benajah Strong, who emigrated with their families from Lebanon, Conn. During the following year the settlement was increased by the arrival of twelve other families, from which time the population gradually increased until in 1771 there were 190 persons here, which population had increased to 988 in 1791, twenty years later. The town was organized and the first town meeting held, March 12, 1768, with Benjamin Wright, moderator, when Elijah Strong was chosen town clerk and "highwayman;" Christopher Pease, Solomon Strong and John Marsh, selectmen, and Daniel Reid, constable. The first representative was Stephen Tilden, chosen in October, 1778. Joshua Hazen was the first justice of the peace, in 1786. The first child born was Roger, son of Ebenezer Gillett, August 6, 1767.

Solomon Strong was born October 6, 1730, married Mary White about 1756 and came to Hartford, as above stated, in 1764. Mr. Strong held many of the town offices and for years was a leading spirit in public affairs. He died at Hartford, December 12, 1799.

Elijah Strong was born August 11, 1733, married Ruth Loomis, of Lebanon, Conn., and came to Hartford with his brothers, Solomon and Benajah. His farm of 360 acres he purchased for about seven cents per acre. He died during the year 1775.

Benajah Strong was born January 17, 1734, married Polly Bacon, of Lebanon, Conn., and for his second wife, Elizabeth Wilson, of Bethel, Vt., to which town he had moved and where he died, in March, 1815. Hon. William Strong, son of Benajah, was born in 1763, and married Abigail Hutchinson, June 30, 1793. Mr. Strong was high sheriff of the county eight years, twice a member of congress, judge of the county court, eight years a member of the State legislature, one of the council of censors of 1834, and also held other offices of honor and trust. He died at Hartford, June 28, 1840.

Hon. Joseph Marsh, was born in Lebanon, Conn., in January, 1725, and came to Vermont in 1772, settled in Hartford, and immediately took a prominent part in the affairs of the State. He was chosen a delegate from Cumberland county, to the provincial congress of the colony of New York, which assembled in the city of New York in February, 1776, but did not attend. In July of the same year, he attended that body as a delegate, the name of which, however, was changed from that of "the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New York," to that of "The Convention of the Representatives of the State of New York." On account of the unsettled state of the country, and the position of the British army, the meetings of this congress or convention were "rotary," and were held at White Plains, in the church at Harlem, at Kingsbridge, at the house of Mr. Odell, on Philip's manor, or in the Episcopal or Dutch church at Fishkill, so as to permit communication with the American army. In August, 1775, the provincial congress of New York voted that the militia of the counties of Charlotte, Cumberland and Gloucester should be formed into one brigade, to consist of three regiments, the upper and lower regiments, and a regiment of minute men. On the 21st of November, at a convention of representatives from the towns of Cumberland county, Joseph Marsh was nominated colonel of the upper regiment, which nomination was confirmed, January 4, 1776, by the committee of safety of New York. During that year Colonel Marsh received orders from General Schuyler and the New York Convention to enlist every fifth man in his regiment for the purpose of assisting in the reinforcement of Ticonderoga. In compliance with these orders he succeeded in collecting his men, and in marching them to the place to which they had been ordered. Notwithstanding he had thus been identified with the interests of New York, yet he was a member of the convention which assembled at Windsor, June 4, 1777, and adopted the name of the State of Vermont, and which re-affirmed the declaration of independence made at Westminster, the January previous, and "did renew their pledges to each other by all the ties held sacred among men," and was also a member of the convention which, at Windsor, in July of the same year, adopted the first constitution of Vermont. On the 26th of March, 1778, the council of safety established a court of confiscation for the county of Cumberland, in order to increase the revenues of the State, and to punish Tories. Of this court Col. Marsh was a member. To them was given power to confiscate and sell all lands which upon sufficient evidence should be adjudged forfeited. In 1778, he was elected lieutenant (or deputy) governor, which at this time he held only one term; but he was again elected in 1787, and was re-elected in 1788, and again in 1789. He was elected a representative from the town of Hartford to the general assembly of Vt., at its first session in March, 1778 but only served during the first day, having been elected lieutenant-governor. He again represented Hartford in 1781, and in 1782. At the session of the legislature in 1782, he was elected chief judge of the Windsor county court, and was annually re-elected in 1783, 1784, and 1785. He was again re-elected in 1787, and was re-elected each year down to and including 1795. He was also member of the first council of censors which assembled at Norwich on the first Wednesday of June, 1785. This council held three sessions, the second being at Windsor, in September of the same year, closing their labors at Bennington, in February, 1786. They, among other things, proposed an amendment to the constitution, (which, however, was not adopted by the convention which they called to consider the proposed amendments, limiting the whole number of representatives to fifty, and providing for their re-election, either by county conventions, or by dividing the State into fifty election districts. Gov. Marsh was for "many years a professor of the Christian religion, and died at Hartford, in January, 1811, in the enjoyment of its hopes and consolations, at the advanced age of eighty-five years." Rev. James Marsh, D. D., for many years a professor in, and president of, the University of Vermont, was his grandson (being son of Daniel Marsh), and was born at the house of his grandfather in Hartford, July 19, 1794. He graduated at Dartmouth College in 1817, and died at Colchester, Vt., July 3, 1842, in the forty-eighth year of his age.

The Lyman family exerted a marked influence in the county during the early religious and business era, making an important factor in the society of Hartford. The puritan founder of the family in America was Richard Lyman. He was born at High Ongar, Eng., in 1580, and embarked with his wife and children on the ship "Lyon," bound for Boston Harbor, in 1631. Among the sixty passengers who made the voyage, were Martha Winthrop, third wife of Gov. John Winthrop, and Elliott, the celebrated apostle to the Indians. The "Lyon" reached Boston November 4th, of that year, and was received by the colonists with every demonstration of joy. In November, of the following year, Mr. Lyman joined the company of colonists who made the memorable trip across the wilderness of Massachusetts, to the banks of the Connecticut, where they founded what is now the city of Hartford, Conn. Here Mr. Lyman resided until his death, in 1640, and his name is inscribed on the monument raised to the memory of the founders of the city of Hartford. His three sons were Richard, John and Robert. John removed to Northampton, Mass., where he died in 1690. John's son, John, resided at South Farms, Northampton, and there kept a public house. He was succeeded by his son Elias, whose grandsons, Justin and Elias, first came to Hartford Vt., establishing themselves in business at "The Point" in 1797-'98, where they drove an extensive and prosperous trade for many years. The Lyman toll bridge, the brick factory and flume, at Hartford, now owned by E. & E. W. Morris, the aqueduct at "The Point" which brings the water from Cæsar's brook across the river, the old Lyman homestead, the residence of Dr. S. J. Allen, Sr., and that of Col. C. S. Hamilton are among the relics of the many enterprises these founders of Hartford were engaged in. They also early engaged in the manufacture of cotton cloths—one of the first in the State.

Justin Lyman, the elder of the brothers, never made his home in Vermont, but resided in Hartford, Conn., where the brothers maintained a branch store. He was born at Northampton, October 17, 1765, and died April 27, 1834. Neither of his three children survived his death. Elias Lyman was also born at Northampton, February 23, 1768. He married Anna White, of Hatfield, Mass., December 30, 1790, and died November 22, 1830, aged sixty-two years. Mrs. Lyman survived his death fourteen years, dying at the age of seventy-two years. They had a family of fourteen children. Elias left his father's farm and commenced life for himself at the age of twenty-one, as a flat-boatman on the Connecticut river. His undoubted integrity and fund of energy and enterprise, however, soon placed him in the front, a position he ever after retained. Lewis Lyman, Elias's eldest son, was born at Hatfield, Mass., December, 17, 1791, received a business education in his father's store, and ultimately became a partner in the business. He married Mary Blake Bruce, of Boston, Mass., March 1, 1821, and died January 29, 1837, leaving a fine estate. He had a family of eight children, four of whom, Mary, (Mrs. S. J. Allen, Sr.) Lewis, of Waltham, Mass., Anna and Maria, are now living. Dr. Samuel J. Allen, Jr., is the only direct male descendant of the family now residing at "The Point." Normand, the second son, was born February 23, 1795, and died February 16, 1865. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits at Hartford, Conn., married Elizabeth Walker, of Providence, R. I., and had three sons and six daughters, none of whom are residents of Vermont. Wyllys, the third son, was born at Hartford, Vt., May 5, 1797. He was educated at Dartmouth and Yale colleges, studied law at the Harvard law school, and commenced the practice of his profession at Hartford village, but afterwards removed to Burlington, where he died December 1, 1862, aged sixty-five years. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Hon. Charles Marsh, of Woodstock. Elias, the fourth son, was born at Hartford, July 8, 1800, and became a successful merchant, though feeble health obliged him to retire from active business at an early age. He went to Burlington in 1834 and remained there until his death. His wife was Cornelia Hall, of Troy, N. Y. George, the fifth son, was born April 6, 1806, and also became a merchant. He married Minerva Briggs, of Rochester, Vt., December 30, 1828. He was postmaster at White River Junction eighteen years, and died at the old homestead July 11, 1879. Four of his daughters and three sons are now living. Charles, the sixth son, was born at Hartford, Vt., October 5, 1808. He began business for himself at Montpelier, Vt., where he married Maria W. Spaulding, December 6, 1837. He has been for many years chief clerk in the dead letter office at Washington, D. C. Simeon, the seventh and youngest son, was born at Hartford, Vt., August 16, 1810, married Lucinda Hall, of Troy, N. Y., and died at Montpelier, Vt., October 1, 1855. These sons have left many descendants living throughout the State and country, not a few of whom have reached positions of eminence. Our space, however, does not admit of further mention of this honored and numerous family.

Hon. Albert Gallatin Dewey, son of John and Mary (Wright) Dewey, who has built up the large manufacturing business at Dewey's Mills, was born at Hartford, Vt., December 16, 1805. At the age of eighteen years Mr.

Dewey lost his father, and the care of his bereaved mother and four younger brothers and sisters devolved upon his young shoulders, a task he faithfully and cheerfully performed. He left the farm to learn the carpenter's trade, and at the age of twenty-six years entered the machine shop of Messrs. Daniels & Co., at Woodstock, who were engaged in the manufacture of cloth making machinery. Here he was soon after sent out by the firm to set up their machinery in different places, and traveled about thus until 1836, when he, with others, commenced building what is at present known as Dewey's mills, located on Quechee river, about one mile below Quechee village, and which he has succeeded in developing to such large proportions, amassing a fortune in the cloth manufacturing business. June 18, 1840, Mr. Dewey married Emily Strong, daughter of Hon. William Strong, and has now two sons in business with him. He represented the town in the legislature of 1850-'51 and 1863-'64, has also held most of the minor town offices, and in 1869 and 1870 served the county as State senator.

Col. Samuel Nutt was born in Topsham, Vt., December 23, 1791. At an early age he bought his time of his father, the family being poor, and went to Hanover, N. H., remained there a short time, then came to West Lebanon and commenced work for Erastus Chamberlain who then kept a hotel there. From this he commenced boating on the Connecticut. Soon after he became of age he was enabled, with the money he had laid up, to purchase a flat-boat and begin business on his own account. Starting out from White River village with his first cargo, a load of lumber for Elias Lyman, his craft soon struck a rock and went to pieces. This great disaster so overcome the young navigator that he swam ashore, sat down and began to weep. Mr. Lyman discovered him in this situation and advised him to cheer up, promising to lend him money to start again. This he did, and from that moment dated his successful business life. In one season alone he built nine river and two canal boats, and was also captain of the John Ledyard, the first steamboat to navigate the Connecticut. He married Hannah Kibbe, of Hartford, December 17, 1817, and reared eight children, viz.: Almena M., Amanda, Adelia, Alonzo B., Almena 2d, Albert, Amelia and Almira. He died in Randolph, Vt., January 1, 1871. Mrs. Nutt died February 6, 1870. Alonzo B. Nutt now occupies the old homestead at White River Junction.

Philip Sprague, a captain in the Revolutionary war, came to Hartford from Rhode Island at an early date, and located on road 10, where his grandson, Israel G. Sprague, now resides. He was the father of a large family of children, only three of whom permanently located in Hartford. Philo lived where his son Edward now resides. Jedediah located on the homestead.

Captain Hophni King came here from Northfield, Mass., at an early date. He was a contractor and builder, and done much of this class of work in this vicinity at that time. He was the father of four children. Asabel located near the center of the town, where he died at the age of seventy years. None of his ten children are living. Miss Eliza F. King, great-granddaughter of Hophni, is the only one of the name in the town.

Captain Phineas Russ was an early settler upon the place now owned by Peter McCabe. Mr. Russ served as captain of militia during the Revolution. He married Molly Powers, of Woodstock, reared four children, and died on the old homestead at the age of seventy-eight years. Mrs. Russ died a few months previous, aged seventy-eight years. Amasa, their eldest son, died in Richford. Susan, the only daughter, married Jared Dean, and died in Canada. Levi married Lois Woodard, and settled where his only son, Major Darias Russ, now lives. His farm is a portion of what was Governor Wentworth's claim. The youngest son, Phineas, Jr., settled on the old homestead.

Nial Russ, brother of Phineas, was also an early settler here. He died in 1813, having reared a family of five children. His nearest descendants now in the town are Darias, Ervin and Asa, great-grandsons.

John Perrin, one of the early pioneers of Pomfret, came here at an early date, locating in the western part of the town. He reared three sons and died at the great age of ninety-five years. His eldest son, Epaph, married Esther Chamberlin, of Woodstock, Conn., reared eleven children on the old homestead, and died at the age of seventy-eight years. Three of his children, Calista, of Quechee village; Martha, (Mrs. Sutherland, of Iowa,) and Mrs. Esther King, of Newport, N. H., are living.

Cornelius Shallies was an early settler in Hartford, locating on the Connecticut, near White River Junction. He subsequently removed to the farm now owned by his grandson, Frank W. Shallies, where he closed his life.

David Bliss was born in Lebanon, Conn., February 21, 1737, married Mary Porter, May 10, 1761, and soon after came to Hartford, locating near the old town house. Later he removed to the farm now occupied by his great-grandson, and where he died May 16, 1831, aged seventy-six years, the father of eight children. Jabez, born here in 1778, married Abigail Cummings about 1800, and died on the old homestead February 23, 1812, leaving six children. John settled on the homestead, married Emeline Colburn, who died May 30, 1874, and still resides here with his son, William C.

William Burch came to Hartford at an early date, purchased about 600 acres of land located where Mrs. Sophia Udall now resides. Here he carried on a mercantile business for a number of years, but finally failed and removed to the West.

Samuel Udall, from New London, Conn., came to Hartford as one of its pioneers and soon after opened a hotel which run until his death. James, the second of his seven children, located on the old French place, now known as the James Udall place, where his daughters, Sophia and Elizabeth C. now live. He married Sophia Chamberlin, reared ten children, filled most of the town offices, and died at the age of eighty-eight years. His eldest daughter, Lydia L., married Henry Kirke Brown, the sculptor, of Newburgh, N. Y.

Nathaniel Dutton came to Hartford, locating on what was known as Christian street, about 1767, remaining here until the close of his long life. He was the father of two sons and four daughters. One of the sons, Elijah, married Susannah Hoar, of Littleton, Mass., and reared eleven children, three of whom, Azro, Cornelia (Mrs. Gillette), and Jane (Mrs. John Newton), are living in the town.

Israel Gillette came to Hartford, from Lebanon, Conn., in 1767, locating near Olcott's Falls, though he subsequently removed to the farm now occupied by his grandson, Daniel O. Gillette. He reared eleven children and died at the age of ninety-one years. Before his death Mr. Gillette was able to make the following statement relative to his family: "I have forty grandchildren, as many great-grandchildren and one great granddaughter who has had two children."

John Gillette, brother of Israel, came about the same time as the latter, and subsequently built the house where Edward Dutton lives. Upon John's decease, his son Billa took the homestead, whose only surviving children are Azro and Ruby, the latter a resident of Illinois.

Thomas Hazen, born September 30, 1719, married Ann Tenney, March 1, 1742, and came to Hartford in 1774, where most of his sixteen children married and settled. His land, or that of the family, extended across the northern part of the town, including about 1,000 acres around the present village of West Hartford. Mr. Hazen built the first two-story house in the town, in the northeastern corner of the same. He died August 19, 1782.

Thomas Savage, born December 15, 1714, married Martha Whitmore, February 24, 1744, and came to Hartford about 1774, locating where William G. Chandler now resides. He reared a family of six children, three of them sons, who lived and died in the town, Seth, Thomas, Jr., and Francis W. Seth married Rhoda Bacon, and reared seven children. Hazen N., son of John, and grandson of Seth, has held the office of deputy sheriff and collector for the past ten years.

David Newton, a Revolutionary soldier, came to Hartford in 1777, and located in the northern part of the town, upon the farm now owned by his grandson, Tyler J. Newton. He married Mary Hazen and reared a family of sixteen children, seven of whom permanently located in the town, though none are now living. Andrew, son of David, was born here January 26, 1781, married Lorena Waterman, when twenty-six years of age, who bore him four children. For his second wife he married Catherine Hazen, who was the mother of Joseph Newton, the present holder of the homestead.

Luther Bartholomew came to Hartford, from Connecticut, about 1783, locating upon the farm now owned by his grandson, Marcus F. Bartholomew. He married Azuba Farnam and reared eight children, dying at the age of eighty-one years. His son Noah died in 1871, leaving the homestead in the possession of his son, Marcus F. George K. is the only other surviving child of Noah. He is a graduate of Dartmouth college and principal of the Bartholomew English and Classical school, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which he founded in 1875.

Walter Pease, born in Enfield, Conn., August 18, 1787, married Eunice Durkee, of Tunbridge, Vt., in 1810, and came to Hartford, subsequently locating upon the farm now owned by his son, George W. Pease, where he died in 1870. Mr. Pease was the father of eleven children, all but two of whom lived to have families of their own, viz. : Horace went west and was a steamboat master for many years. Luther married Harriet Cone, who now resides with her son Horace, and located at Hartford village, upon the farm now owned by his son Charles W. He was an extensive farmer, kept the hotel now run by Charles, and also owned an interest in the Quechee Woolen Co. and a store at Hartford. He died in the spring of 1876, leaving three sons, Allen L., a merchant of Hartford village, Horace C., of the firm of French, Watson & Co., and Charles W., before mentioned. Persis married Samuel Pratt, of Woodstock, Vt. Edward W. resides in Kansas. William H. is a resident of Illinois. H., and is now a prominent citizen of Lawrence, Kan.

Edward Kneeland, from New Haven, Conn., came to Hartford in 1811, and soon after put a set of machinery for carding wool into rolls in a mill that stood upon the present site of Moore & Peck's grist-mill, the first of the kind in the county. He continued this business of wool carding about ten years, then gave it up, following the carpenter trade. He died in 1872, aged seventy-nine years.

Andrew Tracy came to Hartford, from Connecticut, about 1788, locating where his grandson, Charles Tracy, now resides. He married a Miss Bliss, of Lebanon, N. H., and reared seven children, none of whom are now living.

Abijah Taft, son of Artemas Taft, an early settler in Hartland, came to Hartford about 1812, locating in the Russ neighborhood. He married Betsey Bugbee and reared a family of ten children, four of whom, Asaph T., Orrin A., Sarah J. and Mrs. George L. Tarbell, now reside in the town. Abijah died in August, 1854, aged sixty-eight years. Mrs. Taft died in 1871, aged eighty-one years.

Hon. Samuel Everett Pingree, the present lieutenant-governor of the State, son of Stephen and Judith (True) Pingree, was born at Salisbury, N. H., August 2, 1832, and married Lydia M. Steele, of Stanstead, P. Q., September 15, 1869. Mr. Pingree graduated from Dartmouth college in 1857, studied law with Hon. A. P. Hunton, of Bethel, Vt., and was admitted to the bar of Windsor county in December, 1859, and commenced practice at Hartford village. In 1861 he enlisted a private in Co. F, 3d Vt. Vols., serving three years, during which time he was severely wounded, at Lee's Mills, Va., and came home in command of his regiment, being mustered out July 27, 1864. Since the war he has followed the practice of his profession, at Hartford, and has twice been elected State's attorney, has been town clerk a number of years, and September 5, 1852, was elected lieutenant-governor of the State.

Justus Warner French was born at Hardwick, Vt., October 13, 1816, the fifth child of Samuel and Tabitha (Dow) French, the latter being a sister of the famous preacher, Lorenzo Dow. Mr. French received a good practical education and went into business at Randolph Center, Vt. After a few years he began the manufacture of hay and manure forks at Brookfield, Vt., and in 1852 removed the business to Hartford, subsequently establishing the firm of French, Watson & Co. Mr. French was twice married, reared a family of five children, and died September 5, 1874. His widow and one daughter survive him.

The Congregational church of Hartford was organized, probably, a few years before 1786. Previous to this, the first settlers had shown great interest in the religious welfare of the town. As early as 1762, the year before the town was surveyed, the proprietors reserved a lot "for the first settled minister." At the organization of the town, in 1768, the people were called "to see if they will agree to hire a minister to preach the gospel some part of the next year and raise a tax for that purpose." In 1774 steps were taken "to build a meeting house as near the center of the town as convenient." A tax of one hundred pounds was voted and committees were appointed to purchase land and materials. But the building here contemplated was not erected, probably, till near the close of the century. It had two stories of windows, a gallery on three sides, and a sounding board. It is still standing, having been used till within a few years as a town house. For a long time the town as such exercised its function as a religious society; but in 1805 "the broken situation of the inhabitants with respect to religious order," many having withdrawn from the majority because of different sentiments, led the town to form a new society, with Joseph Marsh, as moderator, and Free grace Leavitt, as clerk. This organization continued till the removal of the church to Hartford village. The second Congregational society was organized December 25, 1827, at the village. Its present house of worship was erected the next year and dedicated January 8, 1829. The church and congregation at the Center were invited "to make the new meeting-house their place of worship," which they did soon after. The parsonage was built in 1848 and the chapel in 1860. The church building was remodeled and a new organ purchased in 1872. The support of preaching has been mainly from the first by annual subscriptions, these having been payable weekly since 1875. The present pastor, Rev. S. Ingersoll Briant, began his labors in March and was installed May 20, 1875.

The Congregational church of West Hartford was organized June 3, 1830, Rev. Mr. White being the first pastor. The church building was erected in 1834. The present pastor is Rev. Fred Newport.

The Congregational church of Quechee was organized January 13, 1831, with ten members, Rev. John P. Stone being the first pastor. The church building was erected in 1833. The present pastor is Rev. N. F. Carter.

St. Paul's Episcopal church, located at White River Junction, was organized by Rev. James Houghton, with twelve members, in 1868, Rev. Thomas J. Taylor being the first pastor. The church building was erected in 1874, a neat structure capable of seating 225 persons, and valued, including other property, at $6,000.00. The society now has forty-seven members, with Rev. A. B. Flanders, pastor.

St. Anthony's Roman Catholic church, located at White River Junction, was organized by Rev. M. Pigeon, with 150 members, in 1868. The church building was erected during that year. It is a wood structure capable of seating 300 persons and valued, including grounds, at $3,000.00. The society has about 500 members, with Rev. D. Lynch, pastor.

The Methodist church, located at White River Junction, was organized by Rev. A. J. Hough, with six members, in 1877. The church building, a wood structure valued at $3,000.00, was built the following year. Mr. Hough still remains pastor of the society.

HARTLAND lies in the center of the eastern range of townships, in lat. $43^{\circ} 34'$ and long. $73^{\circ} 34'$, bounded north by Hartford, east by Connecticut river, which separates it from Plainfield, N. H., south by Windsor and West Windsor, and west by Woodstock. It contains an area of 25,350 acres, originally granted by New Hampshire to Samuel Hunt and his associates, in seventy-one shares, by the name of Hertford, July 10, 1761. On the 23d of July, 1766, however, the territory was re-chartered to Oliver Willard and his associates, by New York. The name of Hertford was retained until June 15, 1782, when it was changed to the one it now bears, by the following act of the legislature:—

“Whereas, The town of Hertford lies contiguous to the Township of Hartford, which makes it difficult for strangers to distinguish which of said towns may be meant when either is spoken; and many other inconveniences do attend the having two towns so near of one name in the State; which to remove: Be it enacted by the Representatives of the Freemen of the State of Vermont, in General Assembly met, and by the authority of the same, That the Township of land and incorporate Body, heretofore known by the name of Hertford, shall be hereafter called and known by the name of Hartland.”

The surface of the town is diversified with hills and valleys, most of which are only great enough in extent to form a pleasing landscape picture without retarding cultivation of the soil, which is of a rich, arable quality, producing large crops of grain and grass with comparatively little labor. The timber is that common to most of the towns in this vicinity. The territory is well watered by numerous streams, the principal of which are Quechee river, flowing through the northeastern part, and Lull brook, flowing through the southern portion of the township, emptying into Connecticut river. Many excellent mill-sites are afforded, some of which are utilized. In the extreme western part of the town the rocks entering into the geological

HISTORICAL.

Andover.—The following interesting biographical sketch of Col. Marsh, a cut of whose son's residence we print on page 78, came in too late for insertion in the the body of the work :—

Col. Sylvanus L. Marsh, who died at his residence in Andover, June 15, 1877, was born in Worcester, Mass., December 9, 1789. When six years of age his parents removed to Andover, where they passed the remainder of their lives, residing much of the time on what is now known as the Marsh homestead. Sylvanus early evinced a love for military life, and at the age of seventeen-years enlisted in the standing militia of Andover, and being elected corporal served in that capacity until promoted to sergeant. War with England was now apprehended, and in December, 1808, a sergeant and ten privates were called for from Andover to be ready during the next eighteen months, to march at a moment's notice. To this service Sergeant Marsh volunteered; but the men were not called for. In 1809 he was employed in an hotel at Troy, N. Y., and in 1810 and 1811 he was in Boston, where he served as a coachman for Stephen Codman. In 1812 he was again in Andover and enlisted in the cavalry in Weston, Vt. On June 18, 1812, war with England was formally declared, and in obedience to a call for volunteers from Andover, Sergeant Marsh, in September of that year, enlisted in the 1st Regt., Vt. Militia, under command of Col. Martindale. The regiment was marched to Burlington, thence to Plattsburg and at various points in the vicinity of Lake Champlain, then back again to Burlington, where it was discharged by Gen. Henry Dearborn, being paid off in March, 1813, at Dorset. June 13, 1814, Sergt. Marsh enlisted for five years in the 11th Vt. Regt. Ensign Josiah Shields, a recruiting officer, had established a rendezvous in Andover, from which he absented himself sometime during the summer, and the command devolved on Sergt. Marsh, who on receipt of orders from Capt. Gordon to march his recruits to Rutland, marched twenty-five men to that town on the 11th of September. Here the recruits were organized in a company of the 11th Regt., under the command of Capt. Benjamin Smeed, Marsh receiving the appointment of sergeant in that company.

The company marched to Buffalo, to join the 11th Regt., and on arriving there the regiment was ordered back to Sackett's Harbor, where it remained during the winter. Here Sergt. Marsh was promoted to quartermaster-sergeant, and performed the duties of the consolidation until peace came, in 1815. After the celebration of the Fourth of July, the regiment marched to Greenbush, N. Y., thence to Fort Lewis, L. I., where a new sixth regiment was organized from five of the war regiments, and having performed his duties in the eleventh regiment faithfully, Quartermaster Marsh was re-appointed in the new sixth regiment, by its colonel, John E. Wool. The regiment remained at Fort Lewis until the 9th of September, when it was marched to Fort Columbus, N. Y., where it remained until the 16th of April, 1817, when it embarked by sloops to Greenbush, N. Y., thence by way of Whitehall and Lake Champlain to Plattsburg, for the purpose of taking down the barracks and lessening the cantonment. Here the regiment found plenty of hard work until the 28th of August, 1817, when a visit was received from President Monroe, who ordered the roads repaired from Plattsburg to French's Mills. The sixth regiment was employed on this work until the 18th of November, when they returned to Plattsburg for winter quarters. The following spring the regiment was sent to labor on and about Fort Montgomery, where it remained until after the Fourth of July, when a visit was received from Gen. Brown, who ordered the regiment to resume work on the Chateaugay road at Robinson's fields, and where the men were employed until the approach of winter, when the regiment returned again to Plattsburg for winter quarters.

In the spring of 1819, orders were received from the war department for the sixth regiment and a part of the fifth to start from Plattsburg on the 20th of March, and march to Pittsburg, Pa., to join the military expedition to Missouri. The troops left Plattsburg at the stated time, and after a tedious march through the snow and mud, arrived at Pittsburg, where they rested until the boats, then building there, were completed, when the troops embarked for St. Louis, Mo., arriving there on the 6th of June. Here the provisions were found to be in a damaged condition and had to be overhauled, and Quartermaster Marsh was appointed inspector of the beef and pork. After this work was completed he repaired to his quarters at Belfontaine, where he received an honorable discharge from the service. He remained with the army, however, until the 20th of August, when, with a horse and wagon, he started for Vermont. Crossing the broad prairies of Illinois he proceeded to Cincinnati, Ohio, thence to Wheeling, Va., through Pennsylvania and New Jersey to New York city, where he remained for a few weeks to recruit his health, arriving at his father's home in Andover, on the 23d of October. During the month of November he went to Plattsburg, and on the 15th of December of that year was united in marriage with Sarah D. Thorne, of that town. On the 24th of January, 1820, he returned to Andover with his wife for a permanent home. In June of that year he was chosen and accepted the office of lieutenant in the company of Andover militia. He steadily rose in rank, and in 1830 was elected colonel, which office he retained until 1840, when he was discharged at his own request.

Col. Marsh held various town offices during his life, the duties of which he performed with fidelity and trust. He was fond of reading, and, possessing an excellent memory, was well informed on most subjects. Genial and kind hearted, a ready talker, his society was always pleasant and his conversation instructive. As a military officer he was prompt and efficient, and was probably one of the best field officers who ever commanded a regiment in this town. In politics he was a Republican, and his religious faith was broad and liberal. He was a successful farmer and a highly esteemed citizen of the town in which he had lived so long, and the close of his long and useful life was universally regretted. Sarah D., wife of Col. S. L. Marsh, died October 1, 1882, aged eighty-three years and ten months. Six of their nine children are still living, two having served their country in the late Rebellion, and one of whom was killed in the battle of the Wilderness. Platt T. Marsh, the youngest son, resides upon the homestead, having remained with his parents to care for them in their old age. His family consists of three children, a daughter and two sons.
